 You know... Wacky Hijinks (Etc)

Eventually the victim is cornered. They hold up a block of wood to defend themselves and close their eyes in terror.

Horrible violent sounds are heard. Seconds later the villain has made a beautiful handcrafted artisan Vermont cabinet. The victim is amazed at the craftsmanship.

The villain presents his work in high end galleries hobnobbing with big shots all while frantically waving a sawzall. He makes the cover of shitty magazines. Goes to woodworking conventions and signs autographs with his sawzall. He settles down, raises a family, the kids move away, the marriage falls apart.

One night, alone in his house he looks at a framed picture of his original victim and sighs. He buys a nice car, takes guitar lessons, but deep down inside something is missing. He goes to therapy. His therapist tells him that all his life he's been chasing something, but maybe what he needed was for something to chase him.

He adopts a dog, straps the sawzall to it's back and covers his own body in meat. They run off into the sunset happy and together.
